PENINSULAR & ORIENTAL STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY.

QUARANTINE AT EGYPTIAN AND CONTINENTAL PORTS.

ARRANGEMENTS have been made for passing the Company's Steamers through the Suez Canal in QUEENSTOWN, thus avoiding any detention in Egypt. The Homeward Mails are now being landed at Venice, but the QUARANTINE which is still imposed at this and all other Continental Ports prevents the landing of Passengers and those travelling by the Company's Steamers are advised to remain on board the vessel which calls at Marseilles en route, stopping a few hours only to discharge Cargo—and proceed in her direct to London, thus avoiding all QUARANTINE delays and inconveniences.

The Passages of the Steamers will be accelerated, and they will not call at Malta or Gibraltar.

A Reduction of ten per cent. will be allowed to purchasers of Ten or more copies.

This Standard Work on the Chinese Language, constructed on the basis of Kangxi's Imperial Dictionary, contains all Chinese characters in practical use, and while alphabetically arranged according to the sounds of the oldest dialect of China, the Cantonese, it gives also the Mandarin pronunciation of all characters explained in the book, so that its usefulness is by no means confined to the Cantonese Dialect, but the work is a practically complete Thesaurus of the whole Written Language of China, ancient and modern, as used all over the Empire, whilst its introductory chapters serve the purposes of a philological guide to a student.

A Supplement, arranged for being bound and used by itself, and containing a List of the Radicals, an Index, and a List of Surnames, will be published and sold separately.

but the pagan was not asked to attend a ball in that simple costume. Where are the studs to be placed, any way?

I am aware the Ball is a Scotch one, and that the gallant Major may think he would be paying a happy compliment to his hosts in dressing his men as scoundrels as Roderick Dhu about the legs, but the line must be drawn somewhere, and I think it would be wise to stop at the limit and the sports. Some consideration must also be observed for the soldiers of the weather at November here.

The following bits of midsummer metaphysics may interest my readers:

Art is the joyous externalization of inwardness.

Beauty is the joyful internalization of outwardness.

Tragedy is the humpered soul leaping at victory.

Truth is the ac-ness of the as-it-were.

Right is the awful yea-ness of the over-soul meditating on the how-ness of the thing.

A thing is simply an in-ness. Matter is in-ness possessed of some-what-ness. Mind is in-ness.

Philosophy is the mind trying to find out its own little game.

Parting is such sweet sorrow when you owe about $10,000, and your creditors don't know where you are gone to.

One of the most popular and best of fellows has left us to-day by the departure of Mr. William Hynes in the French Mail.

William has his character impressed on his face. He carries the sincere wishes for his welfare of everyone here who knew him.

With reference to the matter of a gratuity to the widow and children of the Acting Superintendent of the Gaoi, a point is suggested which has not probably occurred to many people here. It is that children born in Hongkong have no parish! We have no workhouse and no system of official relief in this Colony, and here, here does not entitle a child to any claim upon an English parish. The gratuity given by the Government may be enough to enable a widow to reside in a parish at home sufficiently long to have a claim upon it, but that is rather hard upon the ratepayers among whom she elects to reside in England. The finances of this Colony are in a flourishing state and there is no reason why the Government should deal grudgingly with the relics of its officials.

Impoverished English in this Colony are also in worse case than impoverished Scotch here, because the latter have at least a St. Andrew's Society to assist Scotch persons whom Fortune is treating harshly.

I notice that the agents of the Arrathoon Apar Line of steamers are arranging an excursion from the Straits to the Calcutta Exhibition. The passengers will remain on board during the vessel's stay at Calcutta, the additional expense of this arrangement being included in the fare. Excursions of this kind are becoming more popular as the facilities in steam navigation increase. Supposing an exhibition is ever held in this Colony, most enjoyable excursions to Hongkong could be arranged in Australia, Japan, the Straits and the ports of China and Japan. Until such an exhibition is fairly well up to the mark, such an excursion of the kind indicated to be arranged; say once a year, from Hongkong to the Antipodes, India, or even Japan? It would be, or should be, an exceedingly jolly affair. Who would not like, during the hot months, to get on board a gleamer which would take us, for instance, to the chief Japanese ports, and through the inland Sea, providing us with board and lodging for, say a month or six weeks' trip.

One of the arrangements in the scheme for re-constructing the Legislative Council is that a member shall be elected by the Justices of the Peace. Now it has not probably occurred to many of your readers that the majority of the Justices of the Peace are Government officials; consequently only one member will be left for election by the representatives of the general community, in which light I suppose the members of the Chamber of Commerce may be regarded. This is another argument in favor of additional Chinese Justices of the Peace being proposed. There is, I believe, nothing to prevent the "J. P.'s" from electing a second Chinese member from the Council, providing they are so minded, but, unless the Chinese element is very strongly increased, I don't imagine they are likely to do so. Providing suitable men, who are born or naturalized British subjects, can be found, I quite agree with you that the number of Chinese Justices of the Peace should be increased.

ALLIANCE THEFT. Mok Fat, boatman, was charged with stealing one dollar from a shopkeeper at Yau-mah-ti.

Defendant was in complainant's shop when a man came in to change $50, and the complainant, losing one dollar in the transaction, accused defendant of the theft.

Defendant, against whom there was a certain amount of evidence, was ordered to find security in two securities of $15 each to be of good behavior for six weeks. Being unable to do this, he was committed.

STEALING IRON. Li Ahn, coolie, brought up on remand for stealing iron from the Hung Nam dock, was this morning sentenced to one month's hard labour.

LARVENS FROM THE HONGKONG HOTEL.

Tam Ayan, milkman, admitted stealing two forks and one spoon, value about $2, from the Hongkong Hotel, and was sentenced to three months' hard labour.

SHOOTING AFFRAY ON BOARD THE STEAMER "PAUTAH."

We regret to have to publish the particulars of another affray between Chinese and a foreigner in which firearms were used and two Chinese wounded. The China Merchants Steam Navigation Company's steamer Pautah, Captain Patterson, left Shanghai on the 6th inst. for Tientsin and returned to Shanghai on Wednesday last on the 14th inst. Rumours became current that during the trip there had been some disturbance among the native crew, and that when the chief mate interfered to restore order, he was attacked, and that in self-defence he had used his revolver, shot two Chinese dead, and wounded three others.

As to the origin of the disturbance it is difficult to obtain reliable information. It occurred while the steamer was on her way up the Peiho river, and when she arrived in Tientsin two of the Chinese crew were taken to the Hospital there, suffering from bullet wounds received at the hands of the chief mate. The wound of one of them, the boatswain, is reported to be on the head, and he was described as not being out of danger when the Pautah left her downward trip, while the other man is said to be only slightly injured. They were left behind in Tientsin. Another man reported to have received a slight wound, but he was well enough to return in the vessel to Shanghai, as did also the chief mate, who was also rather severely handled in the affray, and is believed about the body.

The disturbance appears to have arisen in consequence of the insubordination of the crew by refusing to "turn to" when requested by the mate to do so. So far as we have been able to gather the facts from what may be termed trustworthy sources, it seems that while the steamer was proceeding up the Peiho river, the mate had occasion to call upon the injured boatswain to assist him in his duties. They did not do so; and the mate for some reason or other went down into the forecastle, where the men were. What then took place the mate and the Chinese will have their own story to tell, and as there appears to be a great divergence between them, we refrain at present from entering into details. Suffice it to say that the mate came out of the forecastle, went to his room, and returned to the forecastle, and the shooting soon afterwards took place. Three or four shots are believed to have been fired, with the results we mention above.

On the return of the Pautah to Shanghai the occurrence was reported to the managers of the China Merchants' Company and after an investigation the mate and all Chinese implicated in the affair were discharged from the steamer. The mate has been in the service of the Company several years, and had the reputation of being a quiet, inoffensive, conscientious, and dutiful man, and thoroughly trustworthy in every respect. —Shanghai Courier.

SOCIAL LIFE IN SHANGHAI.

A correspondent, "Mr. Jack Sole," writes to the Star in the East as follows:—

May 1st.—Dined with Yarrow at the Club; excellent dinner, good company, and good wine; some of the fellows seemed to approve of this last, and were quite jovial over it. After dinner, I happened to be near the bar, where I observed two men, one of them a young-looking fellow, and the other a middle-aged man, who were talking to each other. I remarked that it was a fine evening, whereupon both men became remarkably friendly and insisted I should go home with them. I mildly protested it was my bed-time; but they became only the more pressing, and soon I found myself on the back seat of a dog-cart, with one of my new friends beside me, the other driving, with the mafio beside him. I soon saw the advantage of this plan, because whenever we got on to the side-walk the mafio dexterously twisted the reins and prevented our knocking down walls. It was also wise to place me beside the other man, for, whenever we turned the corner—and we took sharp turns—he gave a loud holler, and would certainly have tumbled overboard ever so many times if I had not clutched him by the arm, and so saved him.

As we bowed along we passed through a sort of phantasmagoria, a kind of nightmare of light and darkness; when we started through a brilliant blaze of light along the road, but suddenly, and apparently without reason, the street lamps dimmed down to a kind of twilight, and things around us seemed dimly. Many a narrow escape we had of running down horse traps and man-traps, as Yarrow calls the Japan cabs. [Meaning to ask Yarrow why he calls them man-traps, anything to do with spring-guns, or any reference to springs at all?] but the clever mafio by much twitching of reins brought us safe through. When I say safe, I mean ourselves, for as we ran over a woman, two children—the little beggars should have been in bed—and four dogs, the mafio, I am sure, hardly "safe," as concerned them. Our most hair-breadth escape was when we were within an ace of running down a drag full of bandmen returning from playing at the theatre; they set up such fiendish yells when they saw us almost on them, that they would have frightened a horse-horse, much less a man, if it had not been for the mafio, at the critical moment the light broke suddenly into dazzling splendour, and so enabled us to get clear. My new neighbour granted out something about "leotie lie," from which I gathered by my great surprise that the singular lights were electric. [Meaning to ask Yarrow to write to the Star to ask if any improvement is possible.]

At last we reached a fine house, the dog-cart stopped, and with some difficulty we alighted. No sooner were we in the house than we heard female voices, and in the drawing-room we found three women. My hosts seemed amused to see me, but did not introduce me to them, and I was soon very glad they did not. Champagne was brought in, and at once the minutes became uproarious. In about five minutes I began to eye the door, and every moment I became more and more convinced of the character of the company I was in. At last, unable to stand any more of the conversation, I made a dash for the door, bounded through the hall and rushed out into the darkness, pursued by my host and his boozehallian crew, amid wild yells and shrieks of laughter. I have not felt so ashamed and crestfallen for many a long day, as I feel now.

And Sunday, Sunday.—Attended the cathedral, saw the preacher and heard his sermon. "Amos," but failed to catch a single word of his sermon; the sound seemed in a hurry to get out, and mounted to the roof. I ringed rather elaborate, but cold; choir music seemed at efforts of a small spider to digest a large fly. I consider this was a pity, because, a choir should sing and not giggle. A gentleman, very particular and correct in the responses, was sitting just behind me; service over, I took a look at him, and was little staggered to find in him my host of last night; he carried an immense prayer-book with a long ivory case only we had a truly devout, not to say sanctified, look, as he marched slowly down the aisle. He glanced at me with an indifferent, and far-away look, as he stopped decorously in his brougham, as though one should say, "Young man, I see you are a stranger; I must, you see, be respectable." Only we had a truly devout, not to say sanctified, look, as he marched slowly down the aisle. He glanced at me with an indifferent, and far-away look, as he stopped decorously in his brougham, as though one should say, "Young man, I see you are a stranger; I must, you see, be respectable." Only we had a truly devout, not to say sanctified, look, as he marched slowly down the aisle.
